Dear Jim:

STATINTL

STATINTL The Central Intelligence Agency wishes to propose [redacted] as a nominee for a Brookings Federal Executive Fellowship.

STATINTL [redacted] is a career civil servant, grade GS-15, with more than twenty years of Federal service in investigative and security work -- an area which normally does not lend itself to research and study in the governmental field. However, [redacted] has ascertained from other experienced investigative supervisors that a continuing need exists for a reference book which not only will fill a void in the personnel security process but also can save many man-hours of research and consultations by investigators acting independently.

A In the attached application [redacted] has included a listing of the many informational sources which bear on his identified problem as well as his justification of need for producing, after the necessary research, a meaningful reference document. It is proposed by the Agency that he take leave from his regular duties to study this particular area and to conduct the necessary inquiries under research supervision of a member of the staff of Brookings Institution. We would, of course, pay the fee of $500 per Fellow to cover part of the cost to the Brookings Institution of instruction, counseling, and assistance during [redacted] proposed study period.

STATINTL [redacted] application for a Federal Executive Fellowship has been recently discussed by Messrs. [redacted] and [redacted] our Registrar. We are hopeful that your Advisory Committee will view [redacted] application favorably.

STATINTL

Sincerely,
SIGNED
